Agenda

Economic Outlook

PDVSA Role in the Economy

Electoral Process

How Chavez won the October 7th Presidential Elections

Deteriorated Economy

- Highest world inflation rate, running on average above 22% in 2012
- Exchange rate (4,30; 5,30 and 10) and international reserves of the country in free fall (US$ 25.929 Billions, August 2012)
- Imports have increased almost fivefold since 2003, fail to alleviate the chronic shortage of supplies (food, medicine, etc.)
- Declining oil production and refineries igniting and the collapse of the infrastructure
- Runaway debt -in 2007 was less than 30,000 million dollars and now exceeds 200,000 million
- Devaluation of 50%-70% is predicted to help close the fiscal gap deficit and narrow the gulf between the official currency exchange rate and black-market rate

Chavez' s main strategies on the Electoral Process

Electoral Campaign

- Social control of the lower classes through the social programs named missions (Misiones)
- Intensive use of television time to intimidate the people who benefits from a mission or social program, resulting in an electoral coercion
- Well planned distribution of electoral centers, given a course of action on the Electoral Day i.e. if it is an electoral center that does not support Chavez it is going to be a slow process to cast your vote to discourage the voter

Vote Casting

- Online information of voters, when they enter the electoral center with emphasis on the ones registered on the list one by ten (1x10)
- Mobilization capacity on Election Day by the use of all means that the state has like vans, cars, buses, trucks, etc.
- Buying power of some voters who are interested on selling their vote

Results

- CNE (Electoral National Council) alignment to announce the winner before all centers are closed, hence the opposition representatives once the result is known feel like they are not needed and therefore they do not care any more on the final result.
